NORTHERN VIRGINIA WRITING PROJECT

The Northern Virginia Writing Project is a cooperative effort of George Mason University, Northern Virginia Community College, and the public and private schools of Northern Virginia. Its purpose is to improve the teaching of writing of all students in all disciplines from kindergarten through university. Each year, NVWP selects twenty-five experienced and talented teachers of writing who receive fellowships to attend the intensive five-week Summer Institute. As Institute graduates, NVWP Teacher/Consultants provide inservice programs, workshops, and credit courses on the teaching of writing to the professional staffs of participating school divisions. Schools, school districts, colleges, and universities seeking to improve writing instruction through inservice workshops and conferences can arrange for NVWP to design and coordinate special training programs for their faculties

*Thursday Seminars are from 4-6 off-campus and are social in nature.
